QUICK AND NIMBLE:

LESSONS FROM LEADING CEOS ON
HOW TO CREATE A CULTURE OF INNOVATION with ADAM BRYANT

Intelligent change is necessary to compete. But how does one transform a company into a culture of innovation? After interviewing hundreds of CEOs, including CEOs of nonprofit organizations, for his Corner Office column in the The New York Times, Adam Bryant has distilled years of wisdom and experience into six practical steps to becoming an innovative culture: A Simple Plan, Rules of the Road, A Little Respect, It's All About the Team, Adult Conversations, and The Hazards of E-mail.

Join The Nonprofit Leadership Collaborative for a down to earth and eminently pragmatic workshop where Bryant establishes a foundation for growth that you can act on immediately—from altering your perspective to learning how to lead with your entire personality in order to bring all of your skills to the table.
