

A CPH LECTURE SERIES EVENT

Racial Health Disparities and Public History: Oral Histories of Latinx and African American Health in the COVID-19 Pandemic

Dr. Maggie Rivas-Rodriguez
Professor
University of Texas at Austin

Thomaia Pamplin
Master's Student in Biomedical Sciences, Cancer
Biology UTHealth/ UT MD Anderson GSBS

March 4th, 6:00-7:30PM CST

[Register on
Eventbrite](https://www.eventbrite.com/e/racial-health-disparities-and-public-history-oral-histories-of-latinx-and-tickets-140420751247)

<https://www.eventbrite.com/e/racial-health-disparities-and-public-history-oral-histories-of-latinx-and-tickets-140420751247>

Professor Rivas-Rodriguez is a former journalist and Director of the Voces Oral History Center, documenting experiences within the Latino community. Pamplin is a Mellon Engaged Scholar Initiative alumna from the University of Texas at Austin, where her research focused on low income, black community members in Houston and their interactions with the healthcare system. Join the live-stream event to hear both women discuss public history and racial health disparities during the COVID-19 pandemic.