

THE NATIONAL WOMEN'S CONFERENCE:

TAKING 1977 INTO THE 21ST CENTURY

A Sharing Stories Challenge from Gloria Steinem

Gloria Steinem wants you, on the 40th Anniversary of the National Women's Conference, to capture your story. Your memories matter.

"It's been my experience in traveling that the National Women's Conference held in Houston was a personal and transforming milestone for many people, from Indian Country to inner cities, from local issues to global human rights.

If you were part of a story that started there -- whether you were present or its events have echoed in your life, tell us your story so that we can learn the impact of this representative national conference -- the result of elections in every state and territory -- that too few people know about and that history books neglect."

- Gloria Steinem

Tell your story about 1977. Snap a short video or audio story on your smartphone or write down your story. Email them to sharingstories77@gmail.com

The Sharing Stories campaign is part of the 40th Anniversary conference, November 6-7, 2017, at the University of Houston. For more information and tips on how to capture your story:
