

LaSandra 'Sandy' Brown Joins OEM Team

As Sandy approached the final stages of relocating from Sacramento, CA. to Houston TX, finding employment was at the top of her list of to do's. Sandy shared that she knew she wanted to move her career into higher education Emergency Management and lucky for her and us the University Of Houston Office Of Emergency Management had an available position.

After accepting the position of Emergency Management Specialist in the Office of Emergency Management, Sandy quickly grew a deep appreciation for being part of the outstanding Campus Safety Team. Over the last few months, she has enjoyed touring the campus and meeting staff and faculty members from various departments. Sandy has shared "The atmosphere from leadership, faculty and staff on campus is phenomenal. The campus itself is diverse, which makes it all around very special. I'm excited to be a part of the Cougar family and looking forward to experiencing everything the university has to offer!" Ginger Walker, Director of Emergency Management shared; "We are so excited to have Sandy join the Office of Emergency Management Team. She has already hit the ground running by assisting departments, colleges and divisions with the annual continuity of operation planning review."

Sandy moved to Houston with her family. Sandy's family are huge sports fans. Most of their free time is spent supporting Sandy's son's high school basketball activities. She also loves living close to the Houston Zoo, where Sandy and her children already have season passes.

Sandy commented; "I'm motivated and excited to begin my new journey in the Office of Emergency Management and proud to be a part of the University of Houston!"
