Here is a comment from the chair of the Academic Committee of the college. I agree that since e-mail has been declared an official means of communication, it be used.

One change that I noted was a move away from email as a permissible method of student notification, back toward use of registered delivery by USPS. Our recent amendments to the college documents include the use of email as an acceptable form of notice and reverting to postal notification would be undesirable, impractical, and out of step with acceptable forms (and student expectations) of modern communication methods.
