BOOK AND ESSAYS FORTHCOMING and IN PROGRESS

The Insubstantial Self: Portraying Identity in Latin American Literature and Art. A book comparing visual and verbal representations of communal selfhood in order to analyze Latin American conceptions of individual consciousness and collective forms of identity. In progress.

“Comparative Enlightenments: Europe and Latin America in the Eighteenth Century.” Presented at the American Comparative Literature Association in Utrecht, Holland, in July, 2017. This essay will become part of the introduction to my book in progress, The Insubstantial Self.

“García Márquez and his Precursors.” The Oxford Handbook of Gabriel García Márquez. Eds. Ignacio Lopezcalvo and Gene Bell-Villada. Oxford University Press, forthcoming 2021.

“El neobarroco como un posmodernismo alternativo,” in Barroco y crisis contemporánea: Perspectivas latinoamericanas. Eds. Borja García Ferrer and Luis Villacañas Berlanga. Universidad Complutense de Madrid. Forthcoming eventually.

TEACHING

I have taught in all areas of modern narrative in English and Spanish, and have developed Comparative Literature curricula in Literature of the Americas, Magical Realism, Postcolonial Literature, and Interartistic Studies, particularly in Baroque and Neobaroque art and literature (essential for an understanding of Latin American literature.) I currently teach cross-listed courses in the History Department as well as courses in the English Department, and graduate students from the Spanish Department regularly take my seminars.

My commitment to study-abroad experiences for our students has resulted in programs in Mexico in literature, art and architecture, in the Middle East in history and religious studies, and in India in the cultures and religions of India.

I have received two Fulbright Senior Fellowships to develop and teach in the Comparative Literature Program at the National Autonomous University of Mexico (1982-83 and 1992-93.) I continue to consult to that program.

In 1990, I received a University Teaching Excellence Award, at that time given to four faculty members annually at the University of Houston.
